SCHEME THAT FAILED

hand. An actor who was convicted of clubbing and pounding his wife almost to death about a year ago, and who did a six months' term for it "over on the island," is now one of the things of beauty and joys forever to be seen swaggering, also effulgent in cinnamon diamonds, in "the alley" that used to be called the Rialto."

"I know what Fil to," said a witty actor, whose popularity has been somewhat on the wane, the other afternoon. "Fil throw vitriol in some little girl's eyes, get 'sent down' for a year, and then won't they break their necks coming to see me when I get out!"

New York's Pool Rooms.

The racing pool rooms haven't been shut down for a minute since the Mazet committee began its work, but they are being run a bit more on the quiet. The password is a bit more on the quiet. The password is now necessary for admittance, and the man who hasn't got the countersign stands in some danger of being thrown downstairs as a "rubbernecker" and a "spy." A well-known San Francisco official, who happened to know that a big pool room was being run in one of the upper stories of a building on one of the 6th avenue Tender-kin corruers walked up to a huge cop lein corners, walked up to a huge cop standing on that corner the other after-noon, and, affecting a provincial manner, noon, and, affecting a provincial manner, inquired:

"Officer, can you tell me where to go to lay down a little bet on the western races?"
The policeman sized the San Franciscan up contemptuously.
"G'wan, Willle," he said. "Don't choo try t' get gay wid me."
"But I really want to know, you see," persisted the San Francisco police official.
"Move on," said the cop. "Went away while yer kin. Dey ain't no pool rooms runnin' in de burg."
"They're off at Louisville!" came down the stairs from the throat of the operator calling off the races, and the San Franciscan smiled and went his way.
"Our Mary."

"Our Mary."

Most of the newspapers have described Mrs. Antonio de Navarro, once the real queen of the world's stage, as "looking nore beautiful than she did when she was with us as Mary Anderson." I saw her in a 5th avenue auction room, at a sale of oric-a-brac, a few afternoons ago. She is oric-a-orac, a rew afternoons ago. She is nothing like so beautiful a woman as she was before her marriage. While she is considerably stouter, her face is haggard, and she shows her years of ill-health quite on she shows his years of historia docu-plainly. Her voice, however, has lost none of its charm. It is still as deep and mu-sical as in other days. She says quite frankly that she abominates New York, and that she shall return to her English home after making a not very protracted visit in this country. visit in this country.

An Ebony Monte Cristo.

The king of Thompson street and of all Coontown just now is to be seen almost any bright afternoon on 6th avenue, with his valet walking twenty paces behind him, like a commanding officer's orderly. The king is a "hot spote" from out of the west, where he is said to have picked up $30,000 at the racing game, last year. He is said to be the proprietor of eighty-five suits of ciothes, with hats shoes and haberdashery to match, and he hasn't exhibited more to match, and he hasn't exhibited more than a fifth of his complete outfit as yet. His daily constitutional is one unending triumph, and his Darktown conferes in the sporting world almost mob him at every foot of his progress. He distributes backsheesh with a generous, if haughty, hand among those of the "spotes" who are "broke," and, all in all, he is said to be a pretty liberal Monte Cristo in ebony.

The autombile is all right for within-the-city-limits traveling, but it has already shown a tendency to get people into trouble shown a tendency to get people into trouble who venture on tours with it. A prominent young society couple, whose engagement was announced a few weeks ago, went out for a ride in Westchester county in one of the autombiles the other afternoon, and the thing broke down and declined to work after dragging them to a point about five miles from a railroad and two miles from a telegraph office. The driver of the motor-carriage couldn't do anything about it, and so the young man perceiving the rapid after dragging them to a point about five miles from a railroad and two miles from a telegraph office. The driver of the motorcarriage couldn't do anything about it, and so the young man, perceiving the rapid approach of darkness, and with an eye to conventionally, had to escort his fiancee across two miles of trackless forest to a telegraph office, where a rig with horses attached to it was summoned from New York.

Sailing Vessels to Europe.

Ships of the motor head things flung out to them in such profusion didn't strike this first-night audience as exactly a fair proposition after they had given up their money to be entertained, and they began to hiss the ailusions to the marketable commodities. "How many kags d'youse git for dat?" yelled a lot of the gallery gods when one of the comedians alluded pointedly to a certain brand of beer.

Nothing daunted, the comedian gradual-ly led up to a mention of a new sort of bis-

It looks as if there might be established a line of old-time passenger packets of the "wind-jammer" variety between New York and Liverpool if the fad for making the transatlantic voyage on sailing vessels continues. This fad began two years ago, and it has been on the grow ever since. There are numbers of fine sailing vessels traveling between New York and English ports at all seasons of the year, and few of them now leave this port without quite a considerable first-class passenger list, made up, in many cases, of prominent and "wind-jammer" variety between New York wealthy people. The reversion to the sailing method of getting across the sea has many things to recommend it, and the owners of ships that take passengers are fitting the vessels up luxuriously for this patronage. At first the persons who took passage for the other side on sailing vessels did so on the recommendations of their physicians for the sake of the long, lazy voyage. Their tales of the enjoyment of sail traveling started the fad going, so that now nearly all of the big full-rigged ships and barks that leave the port of New York carry passengers well able to afford the voyage by first-class steamer. The steamship companies will begin to feel this comship companies will begin to feel this comsmp companies will begin to feel this competition before the present transatlantic voyaging season is over, and there is already talk of starting a line of yacht-like sailing ships to ply between New York and French ports when the tide of exposition travel begins.

The Scheme Didn't Work That new and somewhat transparent scheme, the advertisement of much-exploited articles out of the mouths of actors and actresses, received a setback in one of the most prominent burlesque theaters in New York the other night. From the beginning of the performance it seemed apparent that the lines of the two leading comedians had been written largely for the purpose of introducing allusions to certain sorts of patent medicines, tonics, biscuits, baking powders, beers, and thus on. Now, the streets of New York, and especially the housetops that strike the view of passengers on the elevated railways, are tiresomely littered with huge ads. for such salables, until the population becomes weary of looking at them.
